SATURDAY ...... MARCH 31, 1877.

| For the Dispatch. | Will you inform me why the street-cars charge ten cents in this city and only five cents in New York, Baltimore, Norfolk, and all other cities? The residents of West End, who use the cars constantly, find it a grievous tax which the company impose upon our community. We are obliged to use the streetcars going and coming to Hollywood. It is a surprise to me that the attention of the citizens has not been called to this mat-V. W. M. RICHMOND, March 29, 1877.

RICHMOND, March 29, 1877. Mr. Dispatch: Who the devil is the "Immortal J. N."? Also, what is the particular point or sentiment conveyed in the poetical effusion entled "Jabberwocky"? Auxiously,

[There are reasons why we can't answer either of these questions.]

The Jennings Estate.

BROOKLYN, E. D., March 28, 1877. To the Editors of the Richmond Dispatch : Dear Sirs,-I see by the New York Sun (daily paper), published some two weeks since, an article taken from the above-named paper—viz., the Richmond Dispatch—of the action of the General Assembly respecting the Jennings-estate claimants. Now, as I have some direct knowledge of the facts in that matter, will you please, by return mail, send me such information as will lead to a further inquiry of all the facts, as I am in possession of much that will lead to the truths of all the estates, which I received when in England a short time since?

H. S. Byrrows, Yours truly. 266 south First street, Brooklyn, E. D., New York State. P. S .- Please send directions where I may further write to. [Respectfully referred to Senator Smith.]

Mr. Redfield, in a letter to the Cincinnati Commercial, presents the issue now at stake in the South in the following clear and comprehensive manner: "The question which President Hayes and the American people have to face is whether to keep up indecent and corrupt governments in South Carolina and Louisiana by the use of troops, or withdraw the troops and allow the white people to have decent and honest government of their own ruling, but at the expense of impartial suffrage. That is precisely the case before the country to-day, and there is no use of fooling away time on side-issues. Come to the point at once. Which do you want, a turbulent, corrupt, indecent, imbecile, and good-for-nothing government, such as we have had in South Carolina and Louisiana for some years, on the one hand; or impartial suffrage stamped out in the process of improvement, as has been done in Georgia and Mississippi? With considerable knowledge of the subject, from personal experience, I have no hesitation in saying that Mississippi and Georgia are better off under their present management than they were under the socalled Republican rule. There is less mobviolence and real autagonism, more respect for law, and the law is better enforced; taxation is lower, expenditures reduced, and a much higher tone injected in every department of government. With such results before those who try honestly to inform themselves, it is little wonder that all the TWO-STORY FRAME DWELLING on Seven-Cabinet members will not agree that the troops be withdrawn. They are not all ready for the crushing out of impartial Broad and Marshall.

Broad and Marshall. it bring better local government. They want to experiment a while longer with the fascinating problem."

A poem of six stanzas, entitled from "Fannie." "Where has Our Beautiful Snow Gone?" is received, and respectfully but firmly declined. We don't know where your beautiful snow has gone, and we don't care. We haven't it .- Rockland Courier.

Senator Hamlin has "two bright little boys and a young wife, one of the sweetest and sunniest women in Washington," says Mary Clemmer. But a wife with three bright little boys must be still sonnier .-
